American identification label's data are mandatory to identify your vehicle.

The American identification label generally looks like a square sticker.

Depending on the model and year, it can also look like a metallic plate.

The American identification label is generally situated on one of the vehicle's B-pillar.

Depending on the model and year, it can also be situated in the engine compartment or on one of the vehicle's doors.

If you cannot find your vehicle's American identification label, don't hesitate to get in touch with a Ford Dealer.
